Course Description

This course is designed for students who are able to communicate at a basic level and have completed at least 120 hours of prior study of the Arabic language. It further develops vocabulary and continuously introduces students to more complex sentence structure and higher level grammatical skills throughout the semester. Simultaneously, it introduces various aspects of Arab culture and history. All class exercises and activities are either task-based or student centered. Aside from the primary textbook, students are exposed to other materials such as magazine articles, daily newspapers and short stories. Course highlights include using words and expressions to handle successfully uncomplicated tasks in straightforward social situations; an in-depth knowledge of various aspects of Arab culture (social customs, religious traditions, family life) with particular focus on Morocco; expressing personal meaning; communicating information and expressing thoughts about familiar topics; reading with proper pronunciation and comprehending themes and topics; creating statements and formulating questions based on familiar material; and identifying information in basic personal and social contexts.
