Course Description

The Institute of African Studies hosts 20 of the University of Ghana's required courses (UGRC). Each of the 20 courses is preceded by an introductory course in African Studies. The introductory course aims to educate students to appreciate the contemporary value of African Studies as an area of inquiry, engage with discourses on African realities, appreciate African identities, identify the negative stereotypes about Africa and be equipped to challenge them, understand appropriate methodologies and frameworks for examining Africa and its past through multi-disciplinary approaches, obtain enhanced knowledge in specific areas of African Humanities and Social Sciences. The course continues with a section on Gender studies in Africa where students study concepts such as Patriarchy, masculinity, gender roles, hegemony, etc.. Finally, a comprehensive, conversational section on the language Dagbani is taught.
