Course Description

This is an intermediate Microeconomics course with students largely drawn from those wishing to prepare for Honors in Economics. The course builds on the foundation of microeconomics in ECON1001 (Economics 1A) and discusses in more depth the topics of consumer behavior, firm behavior, game theory and decisions under uncertainty. The course includes a series of lectures and tutorials dedicated to mathematics, which builds on the introductory mathematical economics taught in ECON1002 (Economics 1B).
