Course Description

This course focuses on the physical and social development of the city of Dublin. While some time is taken at the beginning of the course to examine the early development of the city, the main emphasis is on the period from about 1680 to 1950. The course looks at the city from a variety of perspectives not necessarily following a chronological pathway. There is an emphasis on understanding how the forces and processes of the time were made manifest in the streets and urban landscape of the city. It is important to understand Dublin in its European context and to see it as the unique expression of common processes. A background in urban geography is useful for this course. Previous coursework in European urbanization is particularly helpful.
