Course Description

This course provides a comprehensive overview of the archaeological evidence for Southeast Asian history. It is generally possible to see Southeast Asian culture as a diverse historical complex of local pre-historical cultures, Indian-influenced cultures, Chinese-influenced cultures, Islamic-influenced cultures, and European-influenced cultures. Geological separation between insular and mainland Southeast Asia further complicates the situation. This course traces the development of each culture in Southeast Asian through an archaeological examination of its material culture. Course topics include: the age of European influence; the age of Islamic influence; the age of Chinese influence; the pre-modern ceramic trade and Taiwan; sunken ships and underwater archaeology; Southeast Asian castles and towns.
