Course Description

The course explores the beginnings and development of modern Arabic prose literature through the fiction and autobiography of certain key figures of the early 20th century. It examines modernist and revolutionary poetry of the mid- to late 20th century before returning to fiction as a means of investigating the political upheaval that accompanies the turn of the 21st century. The global flow of texts and ideas between the Arab world and Europe is an important point of emphasis throughout the course.
