Course Description

This course is an introduction to listening, reading, writing, and translation techniques used in the composition, reading, and understanding of basic Maori. It is designed for students with little or no knowledge of the language and for those with some fluency wishing to understand simple sentence structure and composition. The class focuses on the basic structure of simple sentences in Maori so that students can compose, read, and understand basic Maori. Students also learn a set of terms which enable them to talk about and analyze the structure of Maori and many other languages. Another skill students acquire is the ability to translate Maori sentences and simple texts into English and English sentences into Maori.
