Course Description

In this course, students develop the skills of listening, speaking, reading, and writing in Mandarin in areas of most immediate relevance such as basic and personal information, shopping, local geography, etc; interact in simple and routine tasks requiring a direct exchange of information on familiar matters; develop strategies for coping with unfamiliar language or unexpected responses, such as asking for repetition or clarification, listening or looking for key words; use Mandarin to reinforce/further their knowledge of other disciplines; acquire linguistics skills, tools and knowledge to become independent lifelong learners by using Mandarin for target academic activities and personal enrichment; develop an insight into the nature of language, culture, and society, and a greater degree of intercultural competence; and work towards the acquisition of a “fifth language skill,” which will enable students to reflect on different cultural values and behaviors to help them develop intercultural sensitivity.
