Course Description

The first term gives students an overview of the trajectory of European integration, of the main institutions of the EU, and of theories that help with the interpretation of the successive steps in European integration as well as policy-making in the EU. In the second term, students examine some of the most highly contested debates about European integration, including debates over EU enlargement, democratic legitimacy, or UK membership. Frequent reference is made to current EU affairs, as reported in the UK media, equipping students with the skills to follow these news, and challenge the ideologically charged way in which EU affairs are often reported in the media.
