Course Description

What is human sexuality? How can we understand erotic desires? Why are some forms of sexuality being constructed as 'normal' while others are considered as 'deviant'? This course introduces how human sexuality is formed by social, economic, political and cultural factors. Course readings address different understandings of sexuality in various cultures with specific focus on Asian cultures. Classic theoretical texts on the sociology of sexuality are also examined in this course. Key topics include beauty myth and body politics, transgenderism and intersexuality, sexual morality and religion, homosexuality, sexual citizenship and sexual politics, sex work and pornography, urban space of desire, and sexuality education.
