Course Description

Beginning in 1978, economic reforms guiding China from a planned economy toward a market-oriented one have promoted the GDP to grow at an over 8% annually. Today, China has become the 2nd largest economy in the world. This course covers the historical background of this transition process and some post-reform topics, such as one child policy, hukou system, and environmental challenges. The course first focuses on the economic behavior and economic lives of Chinese households, then moves to firm's behaviors. Finally, it discusses macroeconomic policies and financial markets.
