Course Description
This course gives students a view of the political history of the Ottoman Empire and contemporary Turkey from the beginning of the nineteenth century through today. Covering almost two centuries, it is a panorama that introduces students to the historical origins of the major themes of current Turkish political life. The course offers a chance to reexamine the major concepts (modernity, secularism, Empire, Nation-State, nationalism, national sovereignty, political parties, political legitimacy, democracy, clientelism, patronage, social mobility, political participation, citizenship, etc.) of political science through the Ottoman-Turkish historical experience. This class is targeted towards students interested in Turkey and those who are interested in the Balkans, Middle East, or the Mediterranean world.
