Course Description
This course examines Britain's relationship with Europe and European unity from 1945 to 2016. It deals with rich historiographical debates and contemporary issues in a global context. The course considers why the British were not founding members of the European community and what led them to join. It analyzes how the UK became an uneasy member state and why Europe was a consistent problem in British politics. The course investigates the 2016 referendum vote to leave the EU.
