Course Description
This course focuses on the period from the 18th century onwards, beginning with the British colonies in North America from initial European settlement. The course focuses on interactions between Native American, African, African-American, and European populations in the colonial period. It examines the first anti-colonial revolution in modern history leading to the creation of a new nation and concludes with a study of the reconstitution of the nation after a bloody civil war and on the eve of large-scale industrialization. Topics include the causes and consequences of the Revolution, the new political system, the development of mass democracy, economic development and territorial expansion into the West, reform movements, sectional conflict between North and South, slavery, the Civil War, and the re-establishment of a national order during Reconstruction.
