Course Description

This course is an introduction to the study of East Asian Art. Each lecture features representative works created from the ancient to pre-modern era of East Asia, particularly of China and Korea. The aims to acquire basic knowledge of East Asian art from art historical points of view, and learning the practical skills of studying and making own presentations about East Asian Art.

Although this course refers to some relationships on visual art between the continent and Japan, the course will not emphasize Japanese art. Those who intend to study Japanese art are recommended to take ARC211 and ARC212 (History of Japanese Art I and II), then take this course before or after then.
