Course Description
This course deepens understanding of Japanese past and current international relations. Struggling toward becoming the ”first-ranked" nation in the West-centric world order, Japan fought many wars, colonized its neighboring countries, and was finally defeated in WWII. Through understanding Japanese past international relations, the course provides deeper insights into Japan's contemporary challenges including improving ties with China and South Korea, strengthening its alliance with the United States, building of a harmonious social space across borders as well as within borders.
