Course Description

Financial statements describe the operation and development of the enterprise in standardized business language and provide decision-making information for the capital market. This course focuses on the three major statements of the enterprise (balance sheet, income statement and cash flow statement), and explains how to use financial information to conduct valuation analysis and strategic analysis of the enterprise. The course covers the fundamental analysis of enterprise financial statements, profit forecast and the method of transforming the profit forecast results into valuation, and analyzes the enterprise operation, strategy, valuation, and risk. Through this course, students master basic comprehensive financial analysis and valuation tools and evaluate enterprise value, investment projects, and select business strategies.
