Course Description

In this course, students develop the tools necessary to evaluate policies related to public economics. For each topic considered, students combine a theoretical understanding of the economic problem with the evaluation of a related policy. The policy evaluations are drawn from academic journal articles and are chosen to highlight a set of econometric methods for program evaluation used by economists. Emphasis is placed on understanding the strengths and weaknesses of alternative approaches to estimating the effect of a policy. Topics are drawn from throughout public economics.
