Course Description

This course includes a review of practice models, intervention methods, and techniques for the practice of social work with a focus on mental health care. Areas of study include the effective promotion of mental health through psychoeducation, the prevention of mental illnesses, intervention once mental illness has been identified, relapse prevention, and rehabilitation services. Specific topics include the treatment of severe and persistent mental health issues, depression and suicide, dual diagnosis (i.e. substance abuse in conjunction with a mental health issue), and effective treatment for those suffering from severe trauma. The course embraces an overall value of 'multicultural competency,' which includes evaluating each social work action and intervention within the cultural context in which it occurs, and modifying and adjusting the methods used to best fit the context.
