Course Description
Between April and July 1994, almost one million people were killed in Rwanda in the course of the last genocide of the twentieth century. The Tutsi community became the target of a mass killing campaign orchestrated at the higher level of the State and widely executed by the civilian population. The violence reached the intimacy of social and affective bounds on an unprecedented scale. Exploring the main particularity of the Tutsi genocide, this course aims to put this major event into its long-term historical context. Based on the study of academic literature as well on written and oral archives, the course is conceived to provide key elements to understand the genocidal mechanisms implemented during the spring 1994 in Rwanda.
