Course Description

This course reviews the relationship between the Roman empire and the cultures outside its borders, focusing especially on the Germans and the Celts in the period 100 BCE to 400 CE. to 400 e.Kr. Class discussions address the material and cultural manifestations of the cultural encounter between the Roman empire and its neighbors, and reexamine key concepts such as imperialism, view of civilization, ethnic origin, social identity, romanization, and hybridity. Parts of the teaching take place at the Lund University Historical Museum and the National Museum of Denmark and the New Carlsberg Glyptotek in Copenhagen.
