Course Description

This course studies the relationship between the Roman Empire and other cultures, especially Germanic and Celtic tribes, outside the realm of the Empire during the period 100 B.C. to 400 A.D. The course discusses how the meeting between Romans and their neighbors took place materially and culturally and covers central concepts like imperialism, civilization, ethnicity, social identity, Romanization, and hybridity. The lectures include site visits to the Historical Museum in Lund and at the National Museum and Glyptoteket in Copenhagen.
