Course Description
This course explores some of the key intellectual tools in foreign policy analysis used to interpret the foreign policy of the United States and other countries. Students develop a strong grasp of foreign policy formulation in the US context and the contestation between divergent international priorities and conceptions of the national interest. Students learn about the main traditions and influences on US foreign policy, the sources of US power in the world, and gain insight into the connections between US foreign policy traditions, elite agency, and real life policies adopted by successive US governments. This course also supports students in developing research skills and in formulating their own perspectives and analyses of US foreign policy, articulating them in verbal and written form.
