Course Description

In this course, students carry out supervised psychology research in the School of Psychology at Sussex. They work with professors on either established research projects, or carry out psychology research in their area of interest. Research projects may come from a wide range of research areas in psychology and may involve a range of different duties. These duties may include review of empirical literature, design of a research study, hypotheses development and testing, data collection, statistical analysis, summary and write- up, and oral presentation of research efforts.
