Course Description
This course presents the social, cultural, and political history of Great Britain from the creation of the Anglican Church by Henry VIII in 1534, to the implementation of laws regarding the poor, up through the abolition of slavery in 1834. Topics include the influence of the Anglican Church and religious relations in Great Britain, the Glorious Revolution, the emergence of political parties, social relations, and the place of women in society. In the discussion section, students analyze primary source documents from the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and practice methods of history dissertation.
