Course Description
This course offers an overview of European history since the French Revolution. Students learn about, and interpret, the great events of the modern period - the revolutions, national unifications, and wars - as well as the processes that have shaped our time, such as industrialization, democratization, imperialism, and changing gender roles. Ranging across political, socio-economic, and cultural themes, and visiting all parts of Europe, from Britain to Russia, from Sweden to Italy, it allows students to debate the great historiographical controversies of modern Europe, and ultimately to reflect on the ways that history informs the crises of the present day.
