Course Description

This course covers China's relationships with Pakistan, Afghanistan, and the five Central Asian countries. The discussion does not include India and the rest of the South Asian countries. The course infers the principles of China's move and behavior toward Afghanistan and the South-Central Asian countries, historically and during Xi's era, and analyzes the effects on the South-Central Asian region and trans-regionally. Additional topics include China's geo-economic and security ambitions in South-Central Asia, counter-terrorism, and a broader picture of the World Order.
