Course Description

This course focuses on the Brazilian Republic from the 1920s to present day. It begins with political projects and social movements in the last years of the First Republic, followed by corporatism, labor, and social legislation. It explores culture politics, and ethnic and racial relations in the New State as well as industrialization and urbanization. Topics include: art, culture, and diversity in the second half of the 20th century; authoritarianism, democracy, and human rights; dilemmas of re-democratization; memory, identity, and citizenship.
