Course Description
This course explores the relationship between language and identity, focusing on how linguistic difference is not a reflection of one's inner essence but a means of constructing who we are in social context. Based on current research in sociolinguistics, it discusses why ideological and discursive processes of identity construction are central to our social life. It also introduces conceptual tools for analyzing identity work in everyday discourse, using them to explore several theoretical and real-world issues in which the question of identity figures prominently.
