Course Description

This course introduces aspects related to Scandinavian culture and society, with a particular focus on the emergence of modern society—not least the welfare state. This is done by reading novels, watching movies, listening to music and discussing architecture, politics, health issues and the impact of democracy on societal changes. Emphasis is placed on certain key periods in order to provide students with an understanding of the common features in the development of the cultural and social systems found in Scandinavia (Sweden, Denmark, Norway, and Finland). The course begins by examining Scandinavia in the Middle Ages. Influences from, in particular, France, Germany, England and the USA are discussed, as is the development of the national characteristics particular to the various countries of Scandinavia. There is a special focus on the development of democracy from the late nineteenth century to the present day. Examples are given of this historical process with literature, art, music, theatre, film, and the history of ideas. The course is of an interdisciplinary nature.
