Course Description

The course is concerned with theories of democratization and case studies of democratic transformations during the so-called “third wave” of democratization from the 1970s to the present. The course analyzes processes of transition and consolidation of democracy and of democratic reversal in the context of globalization. Students study the concept of democracy, theories of transition to democracy, democratic consolidation and hybrid regimes and the crisis of liberal democracy. They focus on the condition of democracy in different regions of the world, including Southern Europe, Africa, Turkey, South East Asia, the Middle East, Latin America, and Eastern Europe.
