Course Description

The course traces the fate of the story of the German magus Faust from the earliest records (the late 16th century Faustbook), via Marlowe, Goethe, and 19th-century opera to 20th-century prose and film versions. Weekly lectures provide the context for each work and outline the main critical traditions. Seminar discussion focus on detailed analysis of the texts and larger comparative questions. No knowledge of languages other than English is required, but students with a good reading knowledge of German have the opportunity to develop their ability to analyze German literary texts.
