Course Description

This is an introductory and interdisciplinary survey course on Korean culture and society. The course provides a comprehensive understanding of Korean culture and society and its larger attendant issues, such as class and gender in traditional Korea, its history of colonialism, Korean War, and their aftermaths, the politics of national division, economic growth and modernization of South Korea, its contemporary cultural expressions, to name a few, in their proper context. Through examination of cultural, historical, anthropological, literary, and cinematic texts the course develops a more inclusive, yet heterogeneous and wide-ranging, view of Korean culture and society.
