Course Description

This course surveys the international scholarship on the history of China from the early twentieth century through the present as it transformed around the major academic centers in North America, Europe, Australia, and Asia. We explore how these new paradigms have transformed China Studies and brought the field into productive engagements with broader intellectual currents and debates. The course examines several prominent narratives that drive debates on China's place in the world. By employing these thematic topics as useful lenses and analytical tools, this course delves into the complex processes of cultural, social, and political change over the modern century and their implications in the contemporary era. It aims to equip students with critical thinking abilities and analytical skills to reflect on current socio-political and cultural issues as the topics under examination recur in contemporary China in a global context.
