Course Description
This course explores a range of key theories and debates in the social and cultural study of contemporary religion. Students are introduced to a particular theory or debate, and then as a group present their initial understanding and questions of relevant literature. Students make connections between these various theories and debates, as well as consider issues which are relevant to these theories and debates. Students examine the social and cultural study of topics including religion, modernization, secularization, individualization, commodification, occulture, mediatization, secularism, transnationalism and diaspora, and lived religion.
