Course Description

This course examines the various theories related to community building and the development of civil society. It also highlights the development of civil society organizations (CSOs) in Hong Kong and internationally, and their growing importance both in the international and local scene. Relevant public issues including legislation, international humanitarian relief, international public health, global ageing, political reform, social welfare, urban development, new development areas planning, racial equality, that are relevant and important to community building are examined. The role played by the CSOs in various public policies in Hong Kong is also discussed.
