Course Description

The class examines and analyzes current trends in interior design and successful interior design examples. It assesses current display designs and proposes suggestions, based on evidence-based design. Students learn to apply selection of colors, materials, and finishes to appropriately convey the design concept, and to meet psychological satisfaction of the space users. They learn from practitioners about interior display and coordination and learn to communicate with space users and design professionals and propose better display and interior coordination for the client and users. Textbook: John Pile, INTERIOR DESIGN.
