Course Description

The course examines the welfare systems of ASEAN member countries, with specific focus on how welfare systems are being prepared for present and future challenges, such as population aging, international migration, and urbanization. Course topics focus on ASEAN member countries and include social and economic development, comparative education systems (early childhood, compulsory, vocational, and higher education), globalization, technology, the role of cultural values (Confucianism, donation and taxes, sufficiency economy, and gender), social work, labor protections, and vulnerable populations (homeless, stateless, aging, and migrant).
