Course Description

This course covers the economic history of the 20th century focusing primarily on Asia. It thus continues where the first semester left off, but this semester can be taken as an independent course. The first half of the semester gives an overview of the history of individual economies. Then the second half of the semester looks at different topics in 20th-century economic history. Topics include the West, the Soviet Union, Japan, China, Korea, India, Thailand, Indonesia, agriculture, demography, manufacturing, international trade, war and imperialism, economic crises, and economic policy. Assessment: participation, group projects, final exam, midterm quiz.
