Course Description
This course examines various aspects of Japanese language usage in relation to culture and society. It compares culture to language usage in different cultures and societies. Students explore what Japanese people living in this contemporary society are actually doing through their communicative practice. Whatever language we use, how we speak and write to others reveals many aspects of ourselves, such as what we are, how we see a situation we are in, and how we treat others. Assessment: attendance, participation, assignments, final report.
