Course Description

This course provides a study of the sphere of public sector activity, the measuring indicators of public sector size, and the structure and functions of public sector budgets. It examines the arguments that justify public sector intervention in the economy and the principal mechanisms of public decision-making. The course also discusses the importance of equity in government spending programs and the instruments for measuring the redistributive effect of public spending policies, as well as the concepts of efficiency and effectiveness of a spending program and techniques for measuring these.
