Course Description

This course presents an analysis of Spanish cinema from its inception in the late nineteenth century to contemporary film. It examines legal frameworks, industrial sectors, creative proposals, notable films, publicity, and spectatorship during the following eras: the birth of Spanish cinema (1896-1929); transition into spoken film and film during the Spanish Civil War (1930-1939); film during the Franco regime (1940-1975); film during the democratic transition and cinema-television relationships (1975-1981); the socialist era (1982-1995); film during Spain's Partido Popular government (1996-2001); and contemporary Spanish cinema (2002-present).
