Course Description

This seminar deals with the concept of the night economy on different levels. Although the focus is on an economic analysis, urban, social, and cultural aspects are also included as cross-cutting issues. The class strives to critically analyze the advantages and disadvantages of the night economy. The course begins with the theoretical basis for understanding the night economy. It then moves on to focus on Berlin and other selected cities that have a significant night economy. An excursion takes place to look at different examples of the Berlin night economy. The last part of the course summarizes and critically examines the contents learned and developed in the seminar.
