Course Description
The course examines Ireland's 20th century. From one country under the union to two independent states, this course analyzes the political changes that shaped the century. Such changes include the move from Hume Rule and Unionism; revolution to independence; dominion to republic; self-rule to direct rule; and from troubles to peace. The course questions the emphasis on the political narrative that has dominated the study of the century, and considers how the priorities of social, economic, and cultural history raise significant challenges for the traditional studies of 20th-century Ireland. Drawing on a wide range of sources and experiences, this course explores the forces that have shaped Ireland's 20th century, and the extent to which events in the second half of the century have shaped the analysis and debate of the first fifty years.
