Course Description

This course focuses on understanding and analyzing the main changes and important aspects of American culture, society, politics, and history in terms of its influence on Japanese society. Featuring Japanese academic writings, this course focuses on how Japanese academics have analyzed American cultural and literary topics.

The first half of the semester features texts written before 1900 while the latter half focuses on stories published after 1900. The analysis of each text, along with its history and social context, fosters an understanding of several aspects of American society and culture.
