Course Description

The course is based on field studies and visits to places of interest such as museums, archives, libraries, and laboratories, which offer a behind-the-scenes glimpse of the city and its university. Emphasis is placed on specific key periods to provide students with an understanding of the general features of the historical development of Lund and its university. The course starts with Lund in the Middle Ages. International influences from particularly Denmark, Germany, France, England, and the USA are discussed, as well as the regional and local development that characterizes Lund and Lund University. Particular attention is given to the emergence of a university culture from the 17th century to present times. Examples from this historical process are selected from literature, art, architecture, objects, archives and history of ideas. The course is interdisciplinary.
