Course Description
Rapidly expanding corporate activity has increased the need for the standardization of accounting and auditing systems, which represent the infrastructure supporting a strong social business world. For instance, movement towards a global system of accounting standards has continued, and the global convergence of the International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) remains in progress. However, the process is complex, and decisions concerning appropriate action continue to be discussed. This course provides the latest trend of accounting practice from brief introduction to intermediate level. In addition, the objectives include principles and practices used by public entities, accountants, corporate executives and internal auditors in examining accounting system and latest IT environment (e.g. artificial intelligence).
