Course Description

This course provides a study of the 20th-century American writer, Willa Cather, with careful investigation of her literary art and of the biographical, historical, and cultural context in which she developed that art. The course identifies, describes, and compares the literary features of a variety of fictional techniques that Cather developed. Students read, discuss, and write about a selection of Cather's short stories and three of her novels: O Pioneers!, Death Comes for the Archbishop, and My Antonia. Students will analyze the themes of these works and the literary artistry through which Cather develops these themes.
