Course Description
This course looks at performance in relation to visual art. It examines what it means to develop performance work within a gallery context and how the "white cube" functions as different from but related to the "black box" of the theater. Students explore the possibilities of performance art as a form emerging from the histories of the visual arts. The course addresses practices such as durational performance and endurance art, action art, performance photography, performance to camera, and installation-performance.
