Course Description

This course introduces students to the field of education as it is studied in the various social sciences by reading selections from the fields of philosophy, history, sociology, anthropology, and political science. In the first half of the class, students learn about the philosophy of education and learning in pre-modern societies as well as the origins and history of early-modern public education systems with a focus on North America and Europe. The second half of the course focuses on the role of education in present-day societies with a discussion of issues relevant to future educators and citizens. The course will discuss readings readings and lecture material to understand the different ways in which education has been conceptualized as a part of the human experience.
